Public vs. secret info. The number of each character type in play is always public. Who holds which role is always secret. This booklet is safe to browse freely — the abilities themselves aren't spoilers, only who has them.

How the Game Works

Night & Day	The game alternates between Night, when everyone closes their eyes and the Storyteller wakes players one at a time for private actions, and Day, when everyone talks openly.
Everyone has a character	Every player is dealt a character at the start of the game. Most characters come with an ability — something you can do, or information you are given. Nobody at the table is a spectator.
Death isn't the end	Dead players stay in the game and can keep talking for the rest of the game. They lose their ability, and get exactly one more vote to use whenever they choose.
Death reveals nothing	When a player dies, their character is not revealed.
Confirming a character	There may be ways to confirm a player's character, in part or in full. Which ways those are, and how far to trust them, is for the table to work out and discuss.
Whispering	During the day, you may step aside and talk privately, one-on-one, with another player.
You can say anything	There are no rules about what you may say. Claim your character, claim a different one, share what you learned, invent it, argue, stay silent — all of it is legal play. Nothing a player says is binding — only the Storyteller's rulings are.
Nominating	During the day, any living player may nominate one other living player for execution. Each player may nominate once per day, and be nominated once per day.
Voting	After a nomination, players vote by raising a hand while the Storyteller counts. A nomination needs votes from at least half the living players to put that player up for execution.
Multiple nominations	More than one nomination can happen in a single day. At the end of the day the nominee with the most votes is executed, and only one execution can happen per day.
Tied votes	If two or more nominations tie for the highest number of votes that day, no one is executed.
Working it out	Read every character's page and think about how those abilities could meet each other. Talk with the other players about how and why something might have happened, and ask the Storyteller when something isn't clear. Exploring that is the game.
Ask the Storyteller	You can privately ask the Storyteller any question at any time — including if something in this guide is still unclear after reading it. That's what they're there for.
The Storyteller is neutral	The Storyteller doesn't play for either team. They run the game, keep track of everyone's character and status, and apply the rules the same way for everyone — they are not trying to help good or evil win.

What the Words Mean

Plain definitions for the words this book and the game use.

PEOPLE

Player	Anyone who holds a character in this game, alive or dead, of either team, yourself included. The Storyteller is not a player. Where an ability says alive player , it means only players who have not died.
Storyteller	The person who runs the game and keeps the Grimoire. Not a player, and not on either team.
Alive	A player who has not died.
Dead	A player who has died. A dead player stays at the table, may keep talking, has no ability, and has one vote left for the rest of the game.
Neighbours	The two players sitting one seat to your left and one seat to your right, dead or alive. Alive neighbours means the nearest living player on each side instead.

TEAMS AND CHARACTERS

Good and evil	The two teams. Townsfolk and Outsiders are good; Minions and the Demon are evil.
Townsfolk	A good character whose ability helps the good team.
Outsider	A good character whose ability is unhelpful or harmful to the good team.
Minion	An evil character that is not the Demon.
Demon	The evil character that kills players at night.
Character	The role a player holds, such as the Butler. Trouble Brewing has 22 characters.
Ability	What a character does, as written on its token and on its page in this book.
In play	A character is in play if it was dealt to a player at the start of this game.
Grimoire	The Storyteller's board, hidden from players, showing every player's character and current status.

ACTIONS AND EVENTS

Night and day	The two halves of a game round. At night, eyes are closed and the Storyteller handles private actions. During the day, everyone talks openly.
First night	The first night of the game, before any day has happened.
Nominate	To publicly put a player forward for execution.
Nominator	The player who made a nomination.
Nominee	The player who was nominated.
Vote	Raising your hand in favour of an execution while the Storyteller counts.
Execute	To put a nominated player to death as the result of that day's vote. At most one execution happens per day.
Die	To go from alive to dead, by execution or by any ability that kills.
Malfunction	When an ability does not work as it is written. A malfunctioning ability can give information that is not true.

TOWNSFOLK

FIRST NIGHT ONLY

Washerwoman

Learns that one of two players is a specific Townsfolk.

On the first night, you are shown a Townsfolk character token, then shown two players. One of those two players is that character.

"I've done his laundry for years — I know his habits better than he does."

TOWNSFOLK

FIRST NIGHT ONLY

Librarian

Learns that one of two players is a specific Outsider.

On the first night, you are shown an Outsider character token, then shown two players. One of those two players is that character — or, if there are no Outsiders in this game, you are told that instead.

“The card catalogue never lies. The people who read it, on the other hand...”

TOWNSFOLK

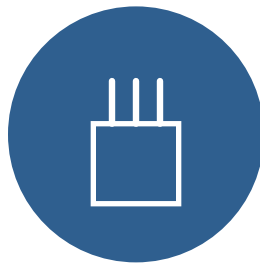

FIRST NIGHT ONLY

Investigator

Learns that one of two players is a specific Minion.

On the first night, you are shown a Minion character token, then shown two players. One of those two players is that character.

"Somewhere in this town, someone is lying to everyone they know."

TOWNSFOLK

FIRST NIGHT ONLY

Chef

Learns how many pairs of evil players are sitting next to each other.

On the first night, you learn how many pairs of evil players there are. A pair is two evil players seated directly beside one another; three evil players in a row counts as two pairs.

"You can tell a lot about two people by whether they'll sit next to each other."

TOWNSFOLK

EVERY NIGHT

Empath

Learns how many of their living neighbours are evil.

Every night, you learn how many of your two living neighbours are evil. Your neighbours are the nearest living players seated to your left and right — this can change as players die during the game.

"I don't need to hear a confession. I can just feel it, sitting this close."

TOWNSFOLK

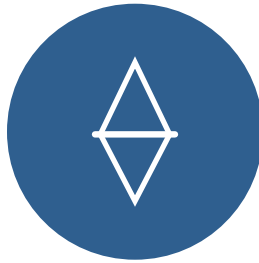

EVERY NIGHT

Fortune Teller

Each night, checks two players for the Demon.

Every night, choose two players — you learn whether either of them is the Demon. At the start of the game, the Storyteller secretly chooses one good player who will always register as the Demon to you, for the rest of the game.

"The cards show me many things. Some of them, I suspect, are lies too."

TOWNSFOLK

EVERY NIGHT, IF AN EXECUTION HAPPENED

Undertaker

Learns the character of whoever was executed that day.

Every night, if a player was executed that day, you learn their character.

"By the time they reach me, everyone tells the truth."

TOWNSFOLK

EVERY NIGHT EXCEPT THE FIRST

Monk

Protects one player from the Demon each night.

Every night except the first, choose a player other than yourself. They cannot be killed by the Demon that night.

"Vigilance is a form of devotion."

TOWNSFOLK

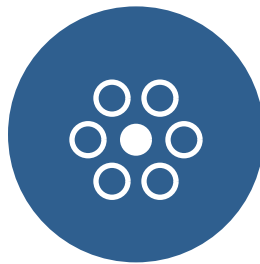

TRIGGERED ON DEATH AT NIGHT

Ravenkeeper

If killed at night, learns one player's character.

If you are killed during the night, you wake immediately to choose a player, and you learn their character.

"Even in my last moment, I'll know something you don't."

TOWNSFOLK

TRIGGERED ON NOMINATION

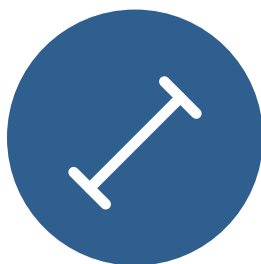

Virgin

The first Townsfolk to nominate them is executed instantly.

The first time you are nominated, if your nominator is a Townsfolk, they are executed immediately. Your ability is spent on that first nomination, whatever the outcome.

"They should have asked someone else first."

TOWNSFOLK

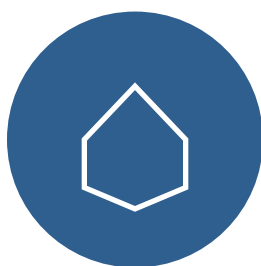

ONCE PER GAME, DURING THE DAY

Slayer

Once per game, can publicly attempt to kill the Demon.

Once per game, during the day, publicly choose a player. If they are the Demon, they die. Your ability is spent either way, whether or not you chose correctly.

"One shot. I intend to make it count."

TOWNSFOLK

ALWAYS ACTIVE

Soldier

Cannot be killed by the Demon.

You cannot be killed by the Demon. You can still be executed, and you can still be killed by other means.

"I've survived worse nights than this."

TOWNSFOLK

ALWAYS ACTIVE / TRIGGERED

Mayor

May win the game outright, and may survive the Demon's attack.

If only three players are alive and no execution happens that day, your team wins. If the Demon tries to kill you at night, the Storyteller may choose for a different player to die instead.

"This town survives because I refuse to let it fall."

OUTSIDERS

Good, but their ability hurts the good team

Goal: the same as the Townsfolk — execute the Demon.

Trouble Brewing has 4 Outsiders. Depending on the number of players, 0, 1 or 2 of them are in play — two more if a Baron is in the game.

Butler

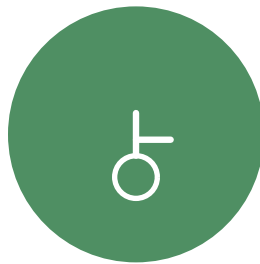

Drunk

Recluse

Saint

OUTSIDER

EVERY NIGHT

Butler

Can only vote when their chosen Master also votes.

Every night, choose another player to be your Master for the next day. The next day, you may only cast your vote on a nomination if your Master also votes on that same nomination. You may still nominate freely — the restriction is only on voting.

"I go where I'm told. It's simpler that way."

OUTSIDER

ALWAYS ACTIVE

Drunk

Believes they're a Townsfolk, but their ability doesn't work.

You do not know you are the Drunk. You believe you are a specific Townsfolk character, and you play the game thinking that is who you are — but that character's ability does not work, and anything it seems to tell you may be false.

"Of course I remember what I saw last night. Mostly."

OUTSIDER

ALWAYS ACTIVE

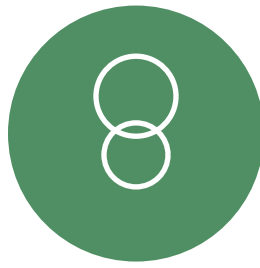

Recluse

May appear evil to other players' abilities.

You may appear evil, and even as a specific Minion or Demon, to other players' abilities, even though you are good. This may happen or not happen each time.

"They watch me from a distance and assume the worst. Good."

OUTSIDER

TRIGGERED ON EXECUTION

Saint

If executed, good instantly loses the game.

If you are executed, your team loses the game immediately. Dying any other way is harmless.

"Be certain before you point that finger at me."

MINIONS

Evil — support the Demon

Goal: protect the Demon, and survive to the final two.

Trouble Brewing has 4 Minions. Depending on the number of players, 1, 2 or 3 of them are in play. In games of seven or more players, the Minions are woken together on the first night and shown the Demon; in smaller games they are not.

Poisoner

Spy

Scarlet Woman

Baron

MINION

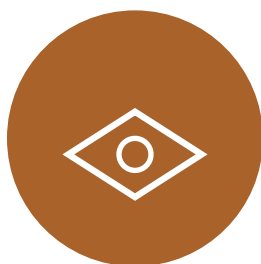

EVERY NIGHT

Poisoner

Each night, makes one player's ability malfunction.

Every night, choose a player. Their ability malfunctions for the rest of that night and the following day — anything they learn may be false, and they will not be told.

"A single drop, and their certainty becomes doubt."

MINION

EVERY NIGHT

Spy

Sees the full truth of every player, every night.

Every night, you may look at the Grimoire — the Storyteller's private book that shows everyone's character and current status. You may also appear as good, and as a specific Townsfolk or Outsider, to other players' abilities.

"I already know your secret. I'm just deciding what to do with it."

MINION

TRIGGERED IF THE DEMON DIES

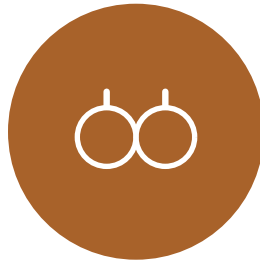

Scarlet Woman

May inherit the Demon's power if it dies.

If the Demon dies while five or more players are alive, you become the new Demon.

"Someone has to carry on the work."

MINION

SETUP ONLY

Baron

Adds extra Outsiders to the game.

There are two extra Outsiders in this game, in place of two Townsfolk.

"Chaos is so much easier to fund than order."

DEMON

Evil — kills a player each night

Goal: stay alive, and reduce the town to two living players.

Trouble Brewing has one Demon, the Imp, and there is always exactly one Demon in play. In games of seven or more players, the Demon is shown their Minions and three characters that are not in this game — safe roles to bluff as. In smaller games, neither.

Imp

DEMON

EVERY NIGHT EXCEPT THE FIRST

Imp

Kills a player each night — and can pass on the role.

Every night except the first, choose a player to kill. You may choose yourself instead — if you do, a Minion becomes the new Demon.

“This body was never the point. The hunger is.”

Quick Rules Recap

- Good wins the moment the Demon dies — by execution, by the Slayer, or any other way.
- Evil wins when only two players are alive and the Demon is one of them, or if the Saint is executed.
- Execution needs votes from at least half the living players, rounded up.
- Dead players keep talking freely, but get only one more vote, ever, and lose their ability.
- A player's character is never revealed when they die.
- Only the Virgin's trigger causes an execution without a vote.
- An ability can malfunction, and the player holding it is not told when that happens.

Companion to the Storyteller Reference Guide — keep this one for players to browse, and the other for running the game.

Setup by Player Count

How many of each character type are in the game. This is public information — everyone at the table may know it, and it is the foundation of most good-team reasoning.

PLAYERS	TOWNSFOLK	OUTSIDERS	MINIONS	DEMONS
5	3	0	1	1
6	3	1	1	1
7	5	0	1	1
8	5	1	1	1
9	5	2	1	1
10	7	0	2	1
11	7	1	2	1
12	7	2	2	1
13	9	0	3	1
14	9	1	3	1
15	9	2	3	1

The Baron changes this.	If the Baron is in play, there are two more Outsiders and two fewer Townsfolk than the table above shows. The Minion and Demon counts never change.
You know the counts, not the names.	At the start of the game the Storyteller tells everyone how many Townsfolk, Outsiders, Minions and Demons are in play — including the Baron's adjustment. Which characters those are, and who has them, stays secret.
Not every character is used.	Trouble Brewing has 22 characters; only the number shown above are dealt out each game. A character you don't see all game may simply not be in it.

What Evil Knows on the First Night

What the evil team is told at the start of the game, and how that changes with the number of players.

Evil knows evil.

On the first night, the Minions are woken at the same time and shown which player is the Demon — and because they are awake together, they also see one another. The Demon is then woken and shown which players are their Minions. Evil spends the whole game knowing exactly who is on their team.

The Demon's bluffs.

The Demon is also shown three good characters that are not in this game. These are their bluffs — roles they can safely claim, because nobody holding them can stand up and contradict the claim.

Games of 5 or 6 players.

Both of those steps are skipped. The Minion and the Demon are not shown each other, and the Demon gets no bluffs. Evil begins the game not knowing who their own team is.
